Both drivers walked away from the scene of an accident early Saturday morning that demolished one car and caused extensive damage to the other. It appears that "quite a bit o f speed w as involved", says Jones. When Jones arrived at the s cene McCormack's Chevrolet had rolled out into a field to the east o f the north - bound lane on Rt. 26. The chassis was completely separated from the body of t he vehicle, and automobile parts were s trewn over a wide area. Toddy's vehicle suffered extensive damage to the engine, front wheels and hood. Both vehicles were termed a total loss.

ACS Helps Conserve Wildlife

Every hunter in Appomattox County has a personal stake in the Agricultural Conservation Program. So does every fisherman, and every family that likes to camp out or picnic in the woods.

That's the opinion of J. A. Martin, Chairman, Appomattox County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee. He offers some facts to prove it.

Mr. Martin said that today 85 percent of the wildlife in the United States is produced on privately owned farms and ranches. Rabbits, foxes, pheasants, quail and other upland game are part of the harvest on farms. Hunters know that farms and ranches with properly installed conservation measures afford the best hunting.

Small game finds concealment in grass, brush and shrubs along the edges of fields and woodlands. These places also are sources of food and shelter. Well-managed farms usually have adequate supplies of water.

Long contour strips of alternate grass or hay and row crops or small grain provide more edges than rectangular fields covered with a single crop.

The Agricultural Conservation Program, which the ASC county committee administers locally, is destigned to help farmers get established — and extend their accomplishments — in conservation farming and in wildlife conservation. The ACP is a cost-sharing arrangement through which the public joins with farmers and ranchers to conserve and protect all the soil, water, woodland and wildlife resources.

He stressed that this program is entirely voluntary. The farmer chooses the kind of practice he wants to carry out. The committee approves his request based on needs of the land and feasibility of the practice, and upon availability of funds in the current year's program. Farmers pay their half (or share) of the total cost in cash, labor, use of equipment, or conservation materials.

Some practices are approved primarily for the benefit of wildlife, food, water or cover. Many practices that are primarily for conservation of soil, water and woodland also provide food, water and cover for wildlife.

Patterson Drug Co. Buys Spencer Drug Store Here

Mrs. Luis Albuerne, above, signs autographs Sunday following worship services at Evergreen Baptist Church. Mrs. Albuerne is a refugee from Cuba, now living with her husband and children in Newport News. To the left are Jesse Arkes and his younger brother, Davis Lee, of Appomattox, who were attending services. They are sons of Mrs. Eileen McCann Elder.

"Cuba No Longer Cuba . . . Now A Russian Base," Says Speaker

Nearly 100 persons Saturday evening heard a Cuban refugee tell how Russia had taken over her native land. Mrs. Luis Albourne, wife of a physician, speaking at Evergreen Baptist Church, was several times moved to tears as she described life in a police state. "He (Castro) gave us to Russia," she said. "We lost Freedom, Liberty, and our Country."

Mrs. Albuerne had her two children, a son and daughter, with her for the week end visit. She and her husband, Dr. Orbel Albuerne, having left their children in Cuba, came to the states some time before that.

There are still missles in the mountains of Cuba, says Mrs. Albuerne. Had the Bay of Pigs invasion been successful, she explained, the missles might not have been installed. "Castro was like a king," after the Bay of Pigs incident, said Mrs. Albuerne, "and underground conspiracy was impossible." "Castro has spies in every neighborhood, in every church, store — at work and in the movies." Even the poorest people, whom Castro proposed to help, attended a private school. He was a "bad-boy" as a youth, says Mrs. Albuerne, and never worked at his profession, though he studied to become a lawyer.

"Nobody knows what Freedom and Liberty mean until you lose them," said Mrs. Albuerne. "All of you have a strong faith," she said, "work together."

A gift of money presented to the Albuernes will be given to help fight for freedom, she said.

100 Years Drug Experience Represented

The Patterson Drug Co., Inc., with its home office in Lynchburg, is purchasing the Spencer Drug Store, Inc., of Appomattox, for an undisclosed amount.

A joint announcement of the transaction which will become effective, Nov. 1, was made Saturday by Charles G. Patterson, Jr., president of the Lynchburg-based drug chain and Fred S. Smith, president of th eAppomattox firm.

The two firms have a combined total of more than 100 years in the retail drug store field.

Patterson said that 'service to Spencer customers will not be interrupted in any way and all present personnel will remain with Patterson's in their same capacity.'

Fred Smith said Monday, 'We feel it is a step forward as far as service is concerned. We have the best customers in the world, and we hope that this change in ownership will result in even better service to the community'.

R. Carroll Hudson, of Lynchburg, secretary - treasurer of the purchasing firm, added that 'We're very fortunate in getting to come up to Appomattox.'

Spencer Drug Store had its origin prior to 1912 when Dr. J. B. Abbitt opened the first drug store in Appomattox. The business, which was first located directly across Main Street from the present store, was acquired by Dr. Pugh and in 1914, by 1917, he sold the business to Chandler F. James who operated the firm under the name of Charles F. James, Druggist, and moved the store to its present location in 1918.

James owned the store until 1944 when he sold it to Harold Y. Spencer. However, James worked for Spencer until his retirement in March of this year. He now lives in Livingston, Ala.

Spencer operated the store as Harold Y. Spencer, Druggist, and in 1949 undertook an extensive remodeling program. Included in the work was the installation of an air-conditioning system and a new fountain. Then in 1954, an adjacent building was acquired, giving the store some 4,000 square feet of floor space.

After the death of Spencer in 1960, the business was acquired by Charles G. Patterson, who is now employed by Fred C. Smith and Frank D. Woodrow under the management of Spencer Drug-store, Inc.

The acquistion of the Appomattox store gives the Patterson chain a total of 15 stores.

Founded in 1909 by the late C. G. Patterson, the firm began its operations at 213 12th St. By 1914 the business had increased substantially and the store was moved to larger quarters at 1120 Main St. A second Main Street store was opened in 1917.

Officers of the firm, in addition to Patterson, are William S. Patterson, executive vice president; Glenn B. Updike of Danville, vice president; E. R. Rush, of Martinsville, vice president, and C. Carroll Hudson of Lynchburg, secretary-treasurer.

Fire Danger In Southside, Va.

The danger of fire in Southside Virginia s timberland continues to mount as the lack of soaking rains and dry windy weather prevails.

Foresters, plagued with forest fires all year are bracing against what appears to be a rough fall fire period. Already, say forest wardens, fires are beginning to break out. Most fires so far are being caused by smokers and forestry officials urge all woods users to refrain from smoking in or near forestland. They urge too, that no burning of trash, brush or any other debris be done until good soaking rains cover the Southside area.

The Farmville 10 county Division of Forestry District reports that during 1963, 365 fires have burned nearly 4200 acres. They urge that extreme caution be exercised to prevent additional forest losses to fire.
